National Disclosure Authority (NDA) Plants Trees with TreePeople in Angeles National Forest

Thursday October 4, 4:15 pm ET

NDA 'Walks the Walk' with Its Commitment to Environmental Responsibility

SANTA MONICA, Calif., Oct. 4 -- National Disclosure Authority (NDA), an independent hazard disclosure company, announced today that they participated in the 14th annual National Public Lands Day by helping to plant trees with nonprofit TreePeople in the Angeles National Forest on September 29, 2007.

During the nationwide annual event, TreePeople and NDA pulled their environmental weight by joining forces to plant 75 trees in the Angeles National Forest. "National Disclosure Authority was thrilled to take part in National Public Lands Day with TreePeople. Our companies are truly natural partners, in our like-minded, strong commitment to environmental conservation and restoration," said NDA CEO and founder Sergio Siderman. "We were very pleased with the opportunity to extend our existing tree-planting program to enhance and preserve national public lands," he concluded.

A 100% employee-owned corporation, NDA represents a "new generation" of disclosure reports, using state-of-the-art computer technology to achieve the most thorough and precise disclosure reports available in the residential and commercial real estate industries. The company also prides itself on its passionate commitment to environmental responsibility, and the NDA "Green Team" practices green conservation in every aspect of its activities.

Every time a client orders a paperless report, NDA plants a baby tree. Several times each year, NDA employees and friends in the real estate community gather to plant trees on NDA's "Green Day."

TreePeople is a nonprofit organization serving the Los Angeles area that offers sustainable solutions to urban ecosystem problems by training and supporting communities to plant and care for trees. The organization also educates school children and adults about the environment, and works with government agencies on critical water issues. "We were very pleased with National Disclosure Authority's participation in our efforts to plant trees on a national day of environmental awareness," said TreePeople President and founder Andy Lipkis. "When a forward-thinking company like NDA devotes time and effort to improving the health of its local community, it sets an example that echoes all over the U.S.," he added.

National Public Lands Day is the nation's largest hands-on volunteer effort to improve and enhance the public lands Americans enjoy. In 2006, 100,000 volunteers built trails and bridges, planted trees and plants, and removed trash and invasive plants.

About National Disclosure Authority (NDA)

National Disclosure Authority (NDA), formed by the most experienced hazard disclosure professionals, uses state-of-the-art technology to provide the most thorough and precise hazard disclosure reports available in the industry. Based in Santa Monica, Calif., NDA is the only independent disclosure company in the nation completely dedicated to the preservation and improvement of the environment. Among other "green" activities, the company plants a sapling for every paperless report it generates.
